In Flanders fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row
That mark our place; and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly
Scarce heard amid the guns below.

We are the Dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow.
Loved and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foe:
To you from failing hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high.
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders fields.

John McCrae (1872 –1918)

On Normandy's green fields where the hedgerows still run and the sands on the beaches lie quiet as air;
on the bluffs stand the cross and the star white and pure;
the flag of our fathers flies high in the sun.

The battlefields calling are seen by a few, who have traveled great distance, to set down their memories for buddies they've loved.
And each waning day, as the sea mourns alone,
the soft sound of Taps roams over the fields,
saying, yes we remember the brave deeds you've done;
we remember your faces, so caring and young.

Yes, We Remember By John Kent
